Bounced the Deacon. The colored population of Atlantic City, a suburb of Norfolk, is greatly excited over 'hoodcoism," as they term it, and what the result will be can only be determined by developments. About two weeks ago a colored youth named Vincent Delous, living back of Atlantic City, said that he had been conjured and made blind. His father, who is a preacher, by some unknown means re stored his sight, and the youth desiring to know who had placed a "speli" upon him, went to a fortune teller. Not having any money, he gave the fortune teller a silver ring for information as to who had made him "go blind." The so-called reader of mysteries placed the ring in a basin of water, and told the boy that he had been pois-oned, and the kind of poison with which he had been "tricked" at once rose upon the surface of the water. The fortune teller told him that he had been "conjured" by a young woman and an old man. The young woman had procured the pois on in the woods, and had given it to the old man, who afterwards met him, and after shaking hands had touched him on the forehead and made him blind. He was told that as he left the fortune teller's house the first female he met would be the woman who procured the poison, and the first man the one who had "tricked" him. The boy left the house, and as soon as he reached the road he saw a female, and a little further on he met an old man who is a deacon in a church. The boy had such implicit con fidence is what was told him, that he went to a well known justice of the peace and asked for a warrant for the arrest of the two parties. Of course this was refused, the magistrate telling the boy his court was for the examination of offenders against the law and not to try "conjure" cases. The boy's father and several colored friends believing what the fortune-teller said was true, had the old deacon, who bears an excellent character, summoned before his church, and last Sunday night be appeared for trial. The investigation resulted in the expulsion of deacon from fellowship, and when he re-fused to leave, four of the brethren seized and forcibly ejected him from the building. Tuesday last the deacon made application to the same justice for the arrest of the four men for assault and battery, but the justice did not care to interfere and the warract recently recounted his experience under the influence of hasheesh. He smoked the hasheesh until he felt a profound sense of well-being, and then put the pipe aside. After a few minutes he seemed to become two persons; he was conscious of his real self reclining on a lounge, and of why he was there: his double was in a vast building made of gold and marble, splendidly bril-liant and beautiful beyond all description. He felt an extreme gratification, and believed himself in heaven. This double personality suddenly vanished, but reappeared in a few minutes. His real self was undergoing rhythmical epasms throughout his body; the double was a marvelous instrument, producing sounds of exquisite sweetness and perfect rhythm. Then sleep en-sued and all ended. Upon another occasion sleep and waking came so rapidly that they seemed to be confused. His double seemed to be a sea, bright and tossing as the wind blew; then a continent. Again he smoked a double dose, and sat at his table, pencil in hand, to note its effects. This time he lost all conception of time. He arose to open a door; this seemed a million years. He went to pacify an angry dog, and endless ages seemed to have gone on his return. Conceptions of space retained their normal character. He felt an unusual fulness of mental impressions—enough to fill volumes. He understood clairvoyance, hypnotism and all else. He was not one man or two, but several men living at the same time in different places, with different occupations. He could not write one word without hur-rying to the next, his thoughts flowing with enormous rapidity. The few words he did write meant nothing. This experience admirably illustrates the close relationship between states of real insanity and transitory affections induced by psychic poisons.—Sci-
